16:19 to: Bridgett Piernik-Yoder
We need an app to keep track of apps for OT!

16:45 to: Carol Ross (UK) @Trio33
Or a blog/facebook page to keep track of the apps maybe?

16:54 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

22:35 to: kirstyes (UK) #2

Thanks Rashid - I've copied and pasted a few but that's a lot easier (doh).

25:48 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

i think definitely it has some mental health ones

26:06 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

i have seen some Chinese language ones (which sometimes are introduced via Yahoo! HK!)

26:46 to: Emily Kringle USA

Is anyone out there using them in adult inpatient physical rehab?--for reasons other than speech/communication? Any specific apps?

27:00 to: Cheryl (@otnotes) USA

but the iOS apps are usually more costly due to their review/development process. I have only paid for 2-3 android apps

27:25 to: Michèle Verdonck

enjoy not paying for apps!!

27:38 to: Michèle Verdonck

Play store is easy way to co-ordinate android apps

27:42 to: Brock Cook

man ive paid for hundreds of apps lol....worth it lol

28:05 to: Dani (munchknmunch, UK)

I've used both Android and iOS, and I find that iOS apps are generally smoother than Android ones, probably due to the approval process

28:27 to: Michèle Verdonck

please re post these comments on AT4OT!!!!

28:48 to: kirstyes (UK) #2

At the end save the chat and post that Michele

29:22 to: kirstyes (UK) #2
