mary lawlor and Cheryl Mattingly does quite a bit related to the 1st question of the project

11:55 to: Merrolee Penman
Action research is a great methodology- we should do more of this type of research in occupational therapy practice

12:05 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89
:)

12:09 to: Melissa Barrett (Australia)
agree :)

Good to be prepared and go in with eyes open - yay for reflection

18:50 to: Merrolee Penman
interesting to reflect about how history shapes our work everyday and how we don't even realise it unless we stop to think about it more

18:50 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT
yes... one thing I definitely need to do if I ever do autism research

18:55 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89
huge transition

19:19 to: kirstyes (UK)

crikey - equipment mentioned in role description!

19:54 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

yup... expectations of family is very important! Dealt with that a lot with parents of children with autism

20:53 to: kirstyes (UK)

Holding the Hope and Keeping it Real - love this.

20:55 to: Merrolee Penman

focus on fix I think comes from medical model saying we will find cures for all these conditions/diseases one day... in some ways it feels like there is a false hope that we have to deal with therapis ts..

20:55 to: Merrolee Penman

20:57 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

hear this a lot... some OT folks think autism is over diagnosed nowadays

21:33 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

from my recovery experience, I believe recovery model is sometimes more important than medical model in regards to autism

22:26 to: Merrolee Penman

to move on.. you have to feel uncomfortable first..

22:31 to: Merrolee Penman

Welcome Kim...

22:40 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

yup... cyberbullying is a "new age" problem... heard it from Terry Olivas De La O & Dr. Alann Salvador (USC alum) at my state OT conference presentation about it recently

22:58 to: Robert Pereira

Does 'recovery' still have a medical model tone Bill?

23:19 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

I guess it depends... because I first heard of it from my Psychosoc class

25:29 to: Merrolee Penman

Enabling II ... do people need a reference?

25:34 to: Sam Ashby

writing up my thesis at the moment just written a section on how OTs in mental health learn to cope with competing discourses (biomedical and psychology)...and the need to develop professional resilie

25:35 to: Susan Burwash (Edmonton, Canada)
JUdy Lee - hope you're here!

26:07 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT
Kirsty made a good point- there is a balance of holding the hope and keeping it real!
A lot of my peers have said to me now, "You know... I probably can tell parents whose kids with autism about you.

26:07 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT
" I was like, "whoa... you need to be really careful about using my story here. you need to know what I started with at 'baseline'."

26:13 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89
Sam that sounds really interesting! I'd love to hear more about it - are you on twitter?

26:58 to: Sam Ashby
no sorry I don't tweet but I am on fb if that helps?

27:09 to: kirstyes (UK)
Hi Bill - I was just quoting Ellen ;o)

27:25 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT
yeah... sure... we can help. :)

27:42 to: Sam Ashby
Also have a paper on professional resilience just about to be published in Australian

29:01 to: Merrolee Penman

Sure will Sam- there's a few of us overlapping... Ellen and I think we have a joint article brewing once we both finish doctorates.

29:27 to: Sam Ashby

yes all these circles are looking very familiar...!

30:17 to: Cathy O (UK)

Wow - you've really put this so well - a cogent and thorough theoretical analysis of a process we've been through - but without this degree of rigour! Wish I'd had your work supporting us !

30:21 to: Susan Burwash (Edmonton, Canada)

gap filling

30:23 to: Merrolee Penman

Is this feeling like Molineux's emphasis on the use of occupation language..

30:30 to: Merrolee Penman

Tracy Fortune's gap filling?

30:44 to: Susan Burwash (Edmonton, Canada)

yes

31:12 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

yup... I have experienced the process of occupation-in-action first hand!

31:18 to: Sam Ashby

using and sharing the language - I've used term becoming professionally bilingual... to find shared language

31:44 to: Susan Burwash (Edmonton, Canada)

a colleague said this was harder than learning a new "foreign" language

31:48 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

the fact that I am here with you guys is the fruits of occupation-in-action, in my opinion.

love this article ^^

32:11 to: Robert Pereira

Dr Clare Wilding's research has salience to the discussion too. Great to hear international perspectives of occupation-in-practice that should be on my reading list, too!

32:15 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

32:23 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89

yes it;s a must-read Bill!

32:56 to: Merrolee Penman

Stuart.. welcome!

value my own practice as a meaningful occupation!!!!

33:32 to: Merrolee Penman

33:47 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89

:D

34:02 to: Rachael Hervey

Hi there I am new to this so after Ellen's presentation at a later date will i be able to go back in and read this list of chat/reading list etc?

34:10 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

That's why I think lifestyle redesign is a great model in occupation-in-action

34:39 to: Scott Latter

yes this is being recorded and will available on the website

34:42 to: Merrolee Penman

HI RAchael - when you go back to the recording all the chat is part of the recording - so you can scroll through the recording to get to the parts of the chat that you want to look at at again.

39:46 to: Brock Cook
im so over ppl using the excuse "we're a very new profession"

40:02 to: Sam Ashby
without validation there is often a pressure to use borrowed theories and techniques

40:10 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89

community SO important... I love these virtual connections, learn so much from you all!

40:13 to: Merrolee Penman
So True Sam!!!

40:15 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT
but in reality we are NOT a "new profession", right?

40:18 to: kirstyes (UK)
Good point Sam

40:40 to: Merrolee Penman
Absolutely Clarissa..... online communities can certainly be key...

40:41 to: Matthew Molineux
Shouldn't we all be occupation specialists - isn't that what occupational therapy is?

41:02 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT
but I think we can combine forces to be better occupational specialists!

41:04 to: Melissa Barrett (Australia)
new grad - mature age student. so proud to be a part of this profession. dreaming of working in community. very inspiring presentation. thank you

41:09 to: Melissa Barrett (Australia)
*inspiring

41:15 to: Merrolee Penman
it was the vision of OT4OT!!! to help OT's to find those virtual communities if they couldn't find them in their own physical locations

41:40 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT
I think stuff like OTalk, Occhat, and Otalk2US will be great!

41:44 to: Jitender, Canada
it is all wonderful...

41:53 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89
Merrolee I think that vision is being realised! There are so many conversations online now both on 4OT communities on Facebook and the #OTalk/#Occhat on Twitter

42:07 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89
Bill - great minds think alike :)

42:21 to: Leo and Cat
We are loving hearing this here in south east australia - inspiring :)

42:21 to: Susan Burwash (Edmonton, Canada)
I think we need an Occ4OT FB group!!

42:25 to: Merrolee Penman
Clarissa - I know thanks to all the wonderful people who have grabbed the opportunities and led it on..

42:41 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT
I will start one then

42:42 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT
now

42:54 to: kirstyes (UK)
That's a great point - I guess people may be worried we are suggesting throwing the baby out with the bath water. Like the idea of changing the language

42:59 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89
we do have an OS4OT which is similar?

42:59 to: Brock Cook
fantastic pic

43:10 to: Merrolee Penman

Online communities are the way to go for optimal inclusion. The next step is for our professional associations to recognise such interactions and collaborations as legitimate knowledge sharing! CPD st thank YOU Ellen for a fantastic presentation!!!!

44:09 to: Rachael Hervey

thank you so much this has been fantastic!!!

44:22 to: Jitender, Canada

fantastic

44:24 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

so do we still need a Occ4OT group?

44:26 to: Ellen Nicholson

Thank you!

44:28 to: Matthew Molineux

Part of me loves the term occupational specialist, but it also sits uneasily with me. Do you think it opens the door for some OTs to say I am not an occupational specialist, I do something else? Whe n in fact by definition as an occupational therapist we MUST ALL be occupation specialists?

44:28 to: Matthew Molineux

45:18 to: Merrolee Penman

hands up for questions please...

46:22 to: Matthew Molineux

sort of thanks

46:32 to: Ellen Nicholson

Email me. :)

47:14 to: Matthew Molineux

Good point Rob

47:16 to: Bill Wong @BillWongOT

i do have a question- how do we convince OT students that they are going to be occupational specialists?

47:17 to: kirstyes (UK)

Oooh not keen on the functional therapist thing

47:40 to: Merrolee Penman

<http://functionaltherapist.org/>

49:04 to: Robert Pereira

We're on the train with you Ellen! But this division is growing and worrying, especially in the US. Go OCCUPATION!

49:15 to: kirstyes (UK)

I've heard occupation specialist at a workshop at COT a year or so ago - I liked that. I'd always felt I hadn't had a 'specialism' as such - felt great to recognise that I am an OT and that's great

49:22 to: Matthew Molineux

if they aren't doing occupation then they shouldn't be calling themselves OT... hence I don't think we need to term occupational specialist

49:48 to: Merrolee Penman

it's almost a verb, not a noun!!!!

50:03 to: Matthew Molineux

I understand, but using the term means some will see it as a choice, I can be an occ specialist or a hands specialist

50:08 to: Cathy O (UK)

a specialist in occupation not Occupational Specialist!!

50:19 to: Robert Pereira

Hello!

50:31 to: Melissa Barrett (Australia)

as occupational therapists we are occupational specialists and remember to incorporate that into our language when describing our professional

expertise

51:01 to: Cathy O (UK)

absolutely melissa!

51:44 to: Anita(2) USC Australia

Thank you for this wonderful presentation. I have to get to the next room :)

51:52 to: Merrolee Penman

no prob Anita..

51:59 to: Melissa Barrett (Australia)

i agree. as a new grad i found a large gap between my focus on occupation and fitting within some of the model of the organisation i was placed with

52:05 to: kirstyes (UK)

This echoes my experience too.

52:06 to: Susan Burwash (Edmonton, Canada)

I am in the final stages of writing up a narrative inquiry into therapists experiences of "doing occupation" and am so delighted to see how OTs work so hard to persevere in doing occupation. Was SO ha ppy to here those narratives. Many parallels with what you found. I look forward to reading your work and to sharing mine with you.

52:06 to: Susan Burwash (Edmonton, Canada)

52:16 to: Susan Burwash (Edmonton, Canada)

no mic as charging so a comment

52:25 to: Clarissa (UK) - @clissa89
